BRIAN MCKIM is a writer and professional standup comic who, over the past 20 years, has performed in every single US state and north of the border.

His writing has appeared in such publications as the D.C. Examiner, FilmFodder.com, and in US Weekly, where he contributes regularly to that magazine's popular Fashion Police feature.

He has been featured in the Boston Comedy Festival, the NY Underground Comedy Festival, and the Calgary FunnyFest, and continues to perform 200+ dates a year in clubs, colleges, casinos and corporate functions across the U.S. and Canada.

In 1999, McKim and his wife, fellow comedian Traci Skene, launched SHECKYmagazine.com as a monthly online magazine "dedicated to the glorification of standup comedy." Today, their popular "blog-azine" is read by thousands of comedians and comedy fans from 47 countries. USA Today called them "charming, sincere and helpful." They've published smart and insightful interviews with such comedy luminaries as Dick Cavett, Shelley Berman, Triumph the Insult Comic Dog, Lewis Black, Richard Lewis and Mitch Hedberg.
